

Independent Living Facilities

Designed to provide low cost housing for the disabled and elderly, Independent Living Facilities provide housing only, although some may offer transportation, recreation and support services. Residents in subsidized facilities are normally expected to pay one third of their monthly income. Some of these facilities may no longer offer subsidized housing or low income housing due to changes in their arrangements with the federal government. By law, federal facilities must accept small pets; however, some restrictions may apply. Other apartments are considered low to moderate income facilities.
